

The Stockholm Junior Water Prize - Switzerland (SJWP-CH) is awarded to young talented students between 15 and 20 years old who have conducted excellent school projects focused on water or sanitation. The award aims to incentivize young students to grow interested in water and sustainability issues and to create interaction opportunities between promising young talents and professionals in the Swiss water sector. The prize comprises different aspects:

The national competition. Swiss Youth in Science (SYiS), a prestigious science contest with more than 50 years of history, provides an excellent platform to reach young researchers from all over the country. The SJWP-CH is one of more than 30 special prizes awarded in the frame of SYiS.

The international competition. The winners of the SJWP-CH represent Switzerland in the Stockholm Junior Water Prize (SJWP), held every year during the Stockholm World Water Week. The event allows the Swiss finalists to share their passion for water with students from more than 30 countries.

Exchange within the Swiss water sector. Opportunities for young talents to exchange with renowned experts in the Swiss water sector are organized throughout the year. These opportunities are provided for the winners of the SJWP-CH and for other students submitting excellent water projects to SYiS.

Sponsoring concept. The SJWP-CH is part of the Youth Strategy of the Swiss Water Partnership (SWP) under the lead of one of its members, the Swiss Toilet Organisation (STO). The prize can be carried out thanks to direct financial support from organizations that are keen to encourage Swiss youth to grow an interest in water.
